Orpheum Hosts Cape Premiere Of 'Justice Is Mind'

CHATHAM --- The writer/director and several cast members of the independent science fiction film "Justice Is Mind," produced in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, will attend the movie's Cape Cod premiere at the Chatham Orpheum Theater Sept. 18.

Writer/director Mark Lund is a Massachusetts native who spent summers on the Cape and has family members in the Dennis area. Part of his first film, "First World," was shot on the Cape in 2007.

"Justice Is Mind" is set in the near future and based on the premise that MRI technology has advanced to the point that it can read a person's memory. The story follows a businessman and restaurant owner Henri Miller, who has suffered from unexplained headaches since childhood. The new MRI procedure reveals that he shot and killed two people, a crime he does not remember. He goes on trial as well as the new technology; and dark family secrets are revealed as the courtroom drama plays out.

"Justice Is Mind," which premiered last year, won numerous awards and played film festivals around the country. It was made for less than $20,000 using digital camera technology and various donated locations, including the New England School of Law in Andover.

"To highlight and showcase local talent was one of the reasons so many individuals worked so hard to bring back the Orpheum," said Kevin McLain, executive director of the theater, "We are thrilled to be hosting more local talent like Mark, and excited to be introducing a new movie to our audience."

Lund is an award-winning magazine publisher, thrice award nominated screenwriter, television personality, producer, director and writer. He has produced and directed for television and stage. As a TV personality, Lund starred on FOX's "Skating with Celebrities" and served as a TV analyst for the sport of figure skating for over 10 years, most notably for CNN during the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City. His first screenplay, "First World," a science fiction drama, was nominated for three screenplay awards and later condensed to a short film version that screened in several countries. He is the author of "Frozen Assets" and "First World: Covenant."

"I am thrilled to have the Chatham Orpheum Theater hold the Cape Cod premiere of 'Justice Is Mind,'" he said in a press release. "For me personally, from my childhood on the Cape, to my first film, and now to my most recent undertaking premiering at the Orpheum, it all feels very full-circle."

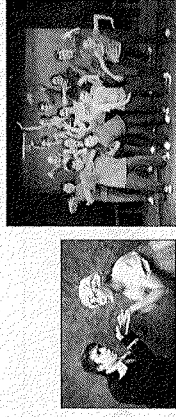

Lund and the cast members will be available for a question and answer session after the screening.

A pre-show cocktail reception will be held at 6 p.m., followed by the screening at 7.
